Military Training Camp at Del Monte Will Open June 26

The 1927 Citizens' Military Training Camp of the Ninth Corps Area, United States Army, at Del Monte, will open June 26 and continue until July 25, it has been announced by F. A. Tiffany of 2066 Carson street, Torrance, who is in charge of camp recruiting in this territory. A scholarship, probably at the University of Southern California, will be offered.

The military training camps are for young men between the ages of 17 and 31 years, the object being to bring together youths of a high type from all sections of the country, thereby developing closer national and social unity, teaching the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship, stimulating patriotism, teaching self-discipline, and developing the physical standard of American youth. Military exercises and athletic games and sports are conducted at the camps under the direction of experts in each branch.

The Del Monte camp will be one of nine similar camps to be established for citizen training in the Ninth Corps Area.

Four separate courses will be given at Del Monte, designated as basic and as Red, White, and Blue courses. The basic course is for men between the ages of 17 and 24, with no previous military training. It provides preliminary training, including physical development, athletics, the school of the soldier, squad and company drill, rifle marksmanship, first aid, camp sanitation, personal hygiene, military courtesy, the meaning of discipline, and studies in citizenship. Those taking the basic course will be given an opportunity to qualify for the next higher, or the Red course.

Men from 17 to 25 years of age are admitted to the Red course, if they are graduates of the basic course, or have had previous military training similar to that given in the basic course. The Red course provides training in different branches of the army—inantry, field artillery, cavalry, and coast artillery—with advanced instruction in the subjects included in the basic course.

Age limits for the White course are 18 to 28, or enlisted men of the United States army. Applicants for this course must possess qualities of leadership. It provides training in the different branches of the army, with the view of qualifying students as specialists and non-commissioned officers. Students in the White course will be given an opportunity to advance to the Blue course if they possess, or show that they later will possess, mental and physical qualifications to become officers in the Officers' Reserve Corps.

For the Blue course the age limits are 19 to 31, and applicants must be warrant officers, enlisted men, and selected citizens who are physically fit and who have completed the White course or have had similar previous military training. They must have not less than a completed high school education, and must possess the personality, appearance, tact, bearing, and general adaptability which will fit them, with further training in the Blue course, to take the necessary mental and physical examinations to become officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps. Graduation from the Blue course does not in itself confer eligibility for the reserve corps. One year's service in the regular army, the National Guard, or Enlisted Reserve Corps, and the successful completion of a prescribed course are required before entrance into the Officers' Reserve Corps.

No obligation for future service in any portion of the United States army attaches to attendance at any of the courses given at the Citizens' Military Training Camps. The courses are free to physically fit citizens within the proper age limits who have the requisite educational requirements, and transportation to and from the camp is paid by the government.
